Project plan looks good. Just for clarity the deadline is the last sprint review, so currently that's on June 21 (the date might change, but it will be in that week).

Your initial user stories are ok, but they will need more details when you start working on them (acceptance criteria are recommended). Then you can divide them in subtasks (for instance create new account could have subtasks "create login screen", "create account entities", "save account details in database" etc.)

This requires you to have some architecture in mind, so you should determine that up front with your group. For instance you need to decide whether you use the use-case architecture or the three-layered architecture.

Based on the discussion with Simona and Tom you got a lot of ideas. Think about them and then try to make it more concrete. We can also start somewhere and change things later on since we are working agile :)
